Children's Advocacy Project

Our MISSION

The Children's Advocacy Project is a team of committed agencies and individuals who work together to provide coordinated forensic and comprehensive services for alleged victims of child abuse and neglect in order to minimize trauma to children, break the cycle of abuse, and foster a more effective and efficient community response to child maltreatment.

A Letter from our EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Dear Friends,

Fairytales. We all grew up with them and most of us dreamed of our own fairytale life. The “perfect fairytale life” looks different for each person, but it is, undoubtedly, a picture of happiness. For many kids who come into CAP, their fairytale dream has been shattered and their happiness altered due to the trauma of being sexually abused, physically abused or from witnessing something horrific. The team at the Children’s Advocacy Project strives to provide these children the opportunity to have their voice and empower them to dream again of a happy life. In 2018, the CAP team coordinated their efforts and worked to help 312 children as they shared their experience, worked in counseling to address their trauma and for some, found the courage to share in court the trauma they endured.

As 2019 begins, the CAP team continues to dream of a future when children do not have to endure the trauma of abuse. In the meantime, our team continues to provide a safe environment for children to begin to heal and to dream again of their future. Thank you for your continued dedication and support of the children we serve!

Once UPON A TIME

Matthew is the baby in a family with five children. Matthew comes from a family who struggles to meet the daily challenges of life. His dad recently took a cut in pay to work for a local company at a job that allows him to be home every night. Matthew's mom died of a drug overdose when he was four and his dad went to prison for drug use. During that time, he lived alone with his aunt Brittney while his older siblings all lived together with another aunt and uncle. When his dad got out of prison, all of the kids moved in with their dad. Matthew was so excited to have his family back. His older siblings had grown closer to each other and seemed like strangers to Matthew. His dad met and married Becca. She was "nice" but didn't know how to be a parent and relied on the older children to keep the younger ones in line. When any child was bad, all the kids had to sit on the outside steps until dad got home from work, regardless of the weather. This created more division between the children as one's behavior resulted in consequences for all the children when dad got home from work.

Matthew was 8 years old the first time he participated in a forensic interview at The Children's Advocacy Project. His second grade teacher noticed bruises behind his ears and down his back. She immediately contacted DFS, who conducted a safety interview at his school. Matthew told the DFS investigator he had gotten in trouble the night before when his mom found food in his room. Matthew admitted his dad had been "really mad" and pushed him against the wall, which resulted in the bruises. CAP was contacted and Matthew was transported to CAP for an emergency forensic interview.

Matthew did not disclose any abuse at CAP. During the forensic interview, he told the interviewer he had fallen off his bed while jumping on it. He denied telling the DFS investigator about being pushed and insisted that he was "a liar." Matthew stated he felt safe at home and that no one ever hurt him. His injuries were inconsistent with his report of how they happened. However, because he didn't disclose abuse he was allowed to return home that evening. DFS offered the family support in the form of a voluntary case management plan. This would have allowed the family access to multiple services including parenting classes and individual and family counseling.

Not all interviews result in a child disclosing abuse. There are many reasons for this including pressure or coaching from the perpetrator, fear of getting in trouble for "telling", reluctance to talk to strangers. Some allegations reported by concerned adults are simply unfounded and the child is truly safe. In Matthew's case, he was afraid his dad would find out and he'd get in even bigger trouble.

Once a child has made a disclosure, even if they later deny it, they are likely to disclose again. Matthew was 9 years old the second time he participated in a forensic interview at CAP. His teacher noticed he had a black eye. He told the school counselor his dad had hit him in the face for "telling his step mom off." His next oldest brother, Levi, had intervened and also been hit. The teacher notified DFS and, after a brief safety interview, Matthew and Levi were both transported to CAP.

Matthew once again denied any hitting or hurting happening in the home. He admitted he'd been mean to his stepmom and that his dad had yelled at him but not hit him. He stated he had gotten the black eye "horseplaying" with his dad and that his dad "said sorry" for hurting him.

Levi told a different story. Levi stated he was "fed up" with getting in trouble at home. He described the recent incident where Matthew received the black eye as he had reported at school. Levi went on to describe several other incidents in which he or Matthew had been "beat up". Levi had recently run away after being hit and had bruises in several states of healing to show for various incidents. Levi was worried about the consequences he would face for telling and begged the interviewer to help him "get out." He also expressed concern for his siblings, particularly Matthew, and was able to describe several recent abuse events.

DFS took protective custody of all five children based on Levi's disclosure. In the following days, the other three siblings were interviewed at CAP. Those interviews resulted in a string of disclosures. Learning that he was safe and not going to have to go home, Matthew admitted to being physically abused and acknowledged abuse of his siblings. Unfortunately, it was impossible to keep all five children in the same foster home. Matthew, Levi and their oldest brother were placed with one family and the two other siblings were placed with another.

At first, the children really struggled in foster care. They had become accustomed to parenting and protecting each other; learning to be children took time and patience on the part of each child and adult. The oldest brother in particular worried about keeping everyone safe and was tormented with worry, wanting to be reassured constantly that his siblings were safe. Levi was concerned about money and bills. He didn't feel safe unless he knew how much money his foster family had and if it was enough to pay for rent and utilities. Many conversations occurred at the foster home and in therapy before Levi was able to trust the adult business to the adults and focus on being a kid.

Matthew is particularly sad and wishes his dad was home. In counseling, he struggles to understand why his dad did "those things" and desperately wants to be "good enough" for his dad to love him. Matthew's dad was charged with felony child abuse and is currently serving a prison sentence. Matthew will be a teenager before his dad is released from prison. Despite her knowledge of the abuse, Matthew's stepmom is allowed to have supervised contact with all five children. In addition, she is receiving counseling and participating in parenting classes in hopes of eventually re-unifying the family.

The Children's Advocacy Project interviews children who have disclosed, or are suspected of being victims of physical and sexual abuse as well as gross neglect. In addition, we interview children who may be victims of sex trafficking. We provide a gateway to assist local agencies in determining what further actions will be taken from case management to prosecution. In addition to forensic interviews, CAP also provides trauma counseling and family support where appropriate. There is never any charge for our services.

Year in REVIEW

January

Joseph Neilson of Gillette gets life in prison for first-degree murder of his girlfriend's 3-year-old boy.

January

Casper resident, Miguel Martinez is found guilty of first-degree and second-degree sexual abuse of a minor and is sentenced to 30-45 years in prison. Nurses at Wyoming Medical Center completed a sexual assault exam and found evidence that the girl had been assaulted.

February

Authorities arrest, Evanston man, Joseph Moore on a warrant for charges of human trafficking of a child, aggravated exploitation of prostitution involving a child, human trafficking for forced sexual exploitation, and aggravated exploitation of prostitution. All of the charges are first or second-degree felonies.

February

A proposed bill that would authorize school districts in Wyoming to provide education on child sexual abuse has been endorsed by a legislative committee and was sent to the full Senate. SF 93, was enacted in March 2018. The law allows school districts to provide opt-in education and training to parents, students, and school district employees on child sexual abuse.

March

Stefan Voltaire of Casper faces 11 felony counts for sexually abusing a 10-year-old over the period of 9 months. Photos exist of Voltaire sexually abusing the child, who is on the autism spectrum. Voltaire pleaded guilty July 2018 to three felonies. Attorneys recommend he serve 30 to 50 years in prison.

June

A California man, Navy veteran and former Boy Scout leader, Dennis Francis Boyle was sentenced to prison for enticing a 14-year-old girl in Wyoming to send him sexually explicit photos to make child pornography. Boyle received two 15-year prison terms to be served concurrently with a seven-year term for similar crimes in California as part of a plea agreement.

July

Allan Wilson, a member of Green River City Council faces charges of sexually abusing a minor in two counties had his trial combined to Sweetwater County. Court documents say that the same boy, a family member, was victimized in each county. The alleged abuse occurred when the victim was as young as 7-years-old. In Dec 2018, Wilson pleaded guilty as part of a plea agreement to one count of second degree sexual abuse of a minor.

August

Former Wyoming Catholic Bishop, Joseph Hart faces a third child abuse allegation. The new case came as a result of diocese's announcement that their investigation concluded Hart had abused two Wyoming boys. The third person came forward about the allegation of abuse in 1980.

October

Cheyenne man, Thomas Langhorne spanked his 5-year-old daughter to the point that she was bleeding in her underwear. He was sentenced to five years of probation after admitting that he “might have over-done it.”

October

Jason Wenner of Cheyenne, who killed the family dog in front of his children was sentenced to 18 to 36 months in prison. Wenner was charged with three counts of child abuse-mental injury, unlawful contact-touch and cruelty to animals-resulting in death.

October

Casper man, Nickolas Jones denies a felony charge of alleging that he bit a toddler on the cheek. He faces a single count of child abuse and if convicted could spend up to 10 years in prison. Three children were taken into protective custody, one child participated in a forensic interview at the Children’s Advocacy Project and made a number of allegations involving physical violence by Jones against herself and the two other children.

November

Casper woman, Latisha Leigh Sholes was arrested after she allegedly got into a physical fight with a 17 year-old girl, leading police find methamphetamine and marijuana inside her apartment. She was booked on charges of child abuse, child endangerment and drug possession.

December

Forrest Freeman of Natrona County is sentenced to 13 to 15 years in prison for sexually abusing a 4-year-old. Freeman forced the girl to perform oral sex on him and showed her pornography.

December

Casper police officers arrested three people and took a baby into protective custody after a probation compliance check led to the discovery of drugs. When police entered the apartment, it was in a state of disarray. Reports indicated it smelled strongly of feces and urine.
